

Disney releases loggerheads in annual sea turtle competition

July 27, 2013 | By Adrienne Cutway, Staff Writer

Just how do you find two sea turtles in the vastness of the Atlantic Ocean?

Just ask Carrie and Claire.

The loggerhead sea turtles were released into the wild Saturday at Disney's Vero Beach Resort with satellite transmitters attached to their shells.

The devices are allowing Internet users to track turtle movements in the 2013 Tour de Turtles, an annual event aimed at helping track the migratory patterns and raising awareness about conservation efforts.

Follow their movements at www.conserveturtles.org or visit www.tourdeturtles.org.